

The Cost of Going Remote on Employee Productivity and Revenue

Economic Benchmarking Survey Results | October 2020

Conducted in conjunction with the Revenue Collective

We now live in a digital-only world of respondents use

6+

applications daily

spend at least

$400

per employee/per month on these apps

This world is constantly evolving...

How often do you change or update processes across your tools (new fields in Salesforce, new Outreach process, etc)

182 Responses

44%

change or update tool processes at least every two weeks

35% are updating processes monthly, 44% are updating processes every quarter

It places unprecedented demands on learning & productivity

More change leads to more time spent training and more support for enablement teams & managers

And, employees are struggling to keep to up

71% of respondents said their employees spend 1 hr per day looking for answers of questions come up due to a lack of understanding on processes of questions come up due to confusion from frequent changes

The result? Chaos, frustration, lost deals and lost productivity

Shifting to remote work only exacerbated this problem

88% of employees are now waiting for responses to questions on Slack

41% indicated a higher gap in knowledge retention since moving to remote

37% said there is decreased productivity without being able to turn to a coworker for answers

35% believe there is a longer ramp time for new hires while remote

Teams are relying on webinars and emails to communicate changes - both of which suffer from low retention rates:

Use webinars

Use emails

We're just starting to recognize the very real business impact

33% said it slows their ability to grow across the org

29% said the longer it takes to train, the longer it takes to earn

24% believe frustration coming from employees is impacting their ability to learn new things

With the highest barrier to maintaining remote productivity being morale

Are struggling to keep up morale

The best companies have reinvented the way they enable their team in this digital age to make them more self-sufficient

They looked at what was impacting their team's ability to put training into practice...

lack of reinforcement after training

too much information shared at once

And, the most important characteristics of effective training...

I honestly have never seen a tool as quickly accepted and loved as Spekit was by our sales group – it was awesome. The only feedback they gave us was “More!” and “Why didn’t we have this when I started?”
